

The Institute for South Asia Studies at UC Berkeley presents

ON NORTH INDIAN/PUNJABI MASCULINITIES

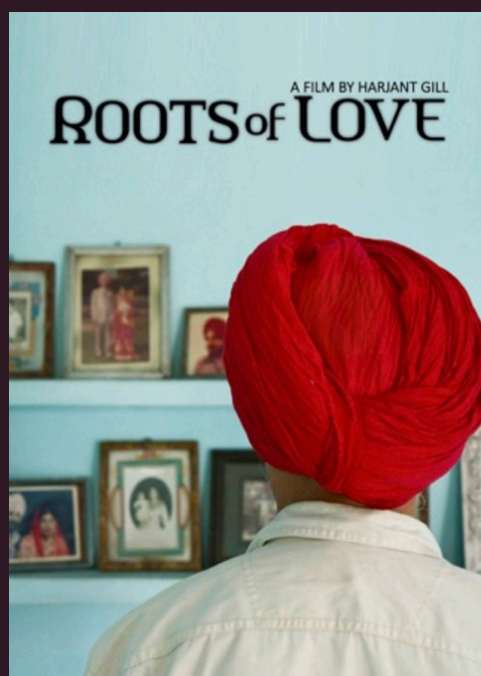

screening followed by a discussion with filmmaker

HARJANT GILL

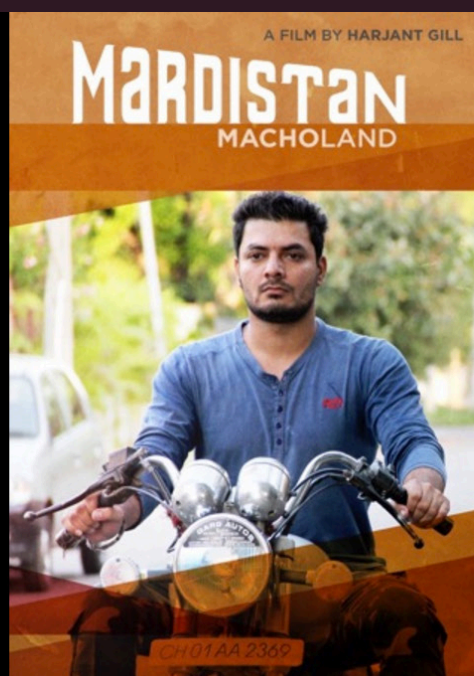

HARJANT GILL is an assistant professor of anthropology at Towson University, Maryland and an award-winning filmmaker whose research examines the intersections of masculinity, modernity, transnational migration and popular culture in India. Join us for a screening of his three-part series on Indian masculinities, exploring the intersections of race, gender roles, religion, sexual violence, and transnationalism within everyday life in Punjab.

Event moderated by Professor of Anthropology and Disability Studies, KAREN NAKAMURA

26 mins

28 mins

40 mins

Thursday, November 9, 2017
5-7:30 p.m.
10 Stephens Hall, ISAS Conf. Room

Event cosponsored by the Sarah Kailath Chair of India Studies and the Haas Institute for a Fair and Inclusive Society - Disability Studies Cluster

For more information go to southasia.berkeley.edu