

Women, Crime, and Retribution: An Ancient Indian Perspective

by Professor Rita Chattopadhyay

Tuesday March 14, 2017
DSSEAS Library
341 Dwinelle Hall
4:00–6:00 PM

Professor Chattopadhyay teaches in the Department of Sanskrit at Jadavpur University, Kolkata, India. She is the author of numerous monographs and edited books on Sanskrit literature and aesthetics, including 20th Century Sanskrit Literature: A Glimpse into Tradition and Innovation; Modern Sanskrit Plays: A Sociological Introspection; Modern Sanskrit Dramas of Bengal; and A study of Candravamsam: An Unforgettable Sanskrit Poem of a Forgotten Bengali Poet.

This lecture is sponsored by the Catherine and William L. Magistretti Distinguished Professor in South and Southeast Asian Studies, the Department of South and Southeast Asian Studies, and The Institute for South Asia Studies. This event is free and open to the public.