Hungry Nation: Food, Famine, and the Making of Modern India

Benjamin Siegel
Assistant Professor of History at Boston University

Benjamin Siegel is a historian of modern South Asia, with particular interests in the politics and economic life of India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh in global contexts. His first book project, Hungry Nation: Food, Famine, and the Making of Modern India (Cambridge University Press, 2018), interrogates the ways in which problems of food and scarcity has structured Indian citizens’ understanding of welfare and citizenship since independence.

Thursday, November 16, 2017
223 Moses Hall
3 p.m.

Part of the IIS Contemporary India Politics Lecture Series