Telugu is part of the Dravidian language family spoken primarily in the Indian states of Andhra Pradesh and Telangana. According to the 2011 Indian census, it is the most widely spoken Dravidian language in India with over 90 million speakers. It is also widely spoken in Fiji, Malaysia, Singapore, UAE, the UK and the US. In the US, the number of Telugu speakers has witnessed a particularly sharp increase of 86% between 2010 and 2017 making it the fastest growing foreign language in the country (according to the Center for Immigration Studies). Telugu is considered a very expressive and evocative language, but with a simple grammar. Telugu was used for the composition of lyrics of Tyagaraja in Carnatic music (one of the two major schools of traditional music of India), because of its musical vowel sounds at the ends of words. For this reason Telugu was sometimes referred to as the “Italian of the East” by 19th century Europeans. Beyond their music, Telugu-speaking peoples have a rich cultural heritage of dance, literature, folk arts, cuisine, handicrafts and handlooms. There are different local and regional spoken dialect variations as well as a distinct high-literary style of Telugu language, which has been used for a vast corpus of poetry, secular and religious epics, novels, and literature in all genres for nearly a thousand years.

The first Telugu language class was held in UC Berkeley in Fall 2007. Since then, Telugu has been taught at Berkeley every year at both the Elementary and Intermediate levels.

The Institute for South Asia Studies at Berkeley would like to raise a $1.5 million dollar endowment to support instruction in Telugu language and literature on a permanent basis. Success will allow Berkeley to do the following:

- Enable heritage and non-heritage students to take Telugu language classes
- Create a context in which heritage and non-heritage individuals can appreciate and participate in broader Telugu language and cultural activities
- Train the next generation of Telugu-focused scholars and academics
- Foster academic connections between Berkeley and Telugu-focused programs in India
- Create new and innovative pedagogical materials to encourage the global study of Telugu
- Support on-the-ground research in all disciplines in Andhra Pradesh and Telangana
- Increase Telugu language holdings in Berkeley's world renowned South Asia collection
- Host an annual distinguished lecture and performance series featuring prominent Telugu scholars, artists and performers
Why Berkeley?
The Institute for South Asia Studies (ISAS) at the University of California, Berkeley is one of the world's foremost centers for research and programs on South Asia. ISAS works with faculty members, graduate students, community members, private institutions, and non-profit organizations to deepen understanding of the region and to create new generations of scholars of South Asia. One key area of focus at ISAS is South Asian language study designed to equip scholars and practitioners with the tools they need to engage most effectively with the communities in which they work. Whether it involves studying classical texts, conducting archival research, working with villagers, or interviewing government officials, knowledge of the local language is imperative to advancing research and engaging effectively with local populations. To this end, ISAS has launched the Telugu Studies Initiative toward focusing attention on the study of Telugu language, culture, and history. Our commitment derives from a deep appreciation of Telugu's rich literary and historical lineages as well as the knowledge that Telugu Studies is woefully underrepresented in US academia compared to Tamil, Hindi, Urdu, and other Indian languages.

Experience to date
Telugu has been taught at UC Berkeley since June 2007 when ISAS—with the tremendous support from the Telugu community, began a Telugu Studies-focused fundraising drive. This money, along with Title VI federal government funding, enabled the hire of Berkeley’s first Telugu lecturer. Since then, Berkeley has graduated three PhD students who primarily worked with Telugu language materials and taught Introductory and Intermediate level Telugu every year. Between 2007 and the present, between 15 and 20 students have benefited annually from Berkeley’s Telugu language offerings.

Telugu-related offerings at UC Berkeley

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Language Courses</th>
<th>Language Research Funding</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Introductory Telugu</td>
<td>The Telugu Society of America (TELSA) Summer Studies Research Award provides for one annual grant of $2500 in support of quality interdisciplinary research on topics pertaining to the people, language, region, culture, political economy, rural and urban planning of Andhra Pradesh and Telangana. Details at southasia.berkeley.edu/telugu-award.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Intermediate Telugu</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Why to Give
The University of California at Berkeley invites alumni, parents and members of the Telugu-speaking community to join in supporting the Telugu Studies Initiative. Gifts from families, businesses, and other organizations are also encouraged. Gifts may be given in the following forms:

- Outright cash contributions, tax-deductible within certain limits of law
- A pledge to be paid over several years
- Gifts of securities
- Matching gifts by employers. Many companies match gifts from retirees and board members as well as employees
- Bequests

All donations are tax-deductible. All individuals donating above $5000 will be acknowledged on the ISAS Telugu Studies webpage (https://southasia.berkeley.edu/telugu-studies-initiative).

How to Give
- Online: https://give.berkeley.edu/fund/FU0831000
- By check: Please make the check payable to “UC Berkeley Foundation” and mail it to UC Berkeley Foundation, Attn.: Gift Services, 1995 University Avenue, Suite 400, Berkeley, CA 94704-1070. Please mention “Institute for South Asia Studies - Telugu Studies Fund 52261” in the memo section.

For more information on giving opportunities, please contact:

Anirban Gupt-Nigam, Associate Director
Institute for South Asia Studies,
10 Stephens Hall, Berkeley CA 94720
(510) 642-3608
anirbang@berkeley.edu

A testimonial by Sarala Kal, an alumna of the Telugu Studies program at UC Berkeley

“I know for a fact that if it had not been for the fortunate opportunity to study Telugu at Berkeley, I would not have been able to learn to read or write Telugu, and I am so proud and honored that I am able to do so.”

Sarala Kal, 2013

A testimonial by Sarala Kal, an alumna of the Telugu Studies program at UC Berkeley